LiftFund & CNote bring Impact Investing locally to level the financial playing field for Women Entrepreneurs and Entrepreneurs of Color

SAN ANTONIO – LiftFund entered a partnership with CNote, a national impact investment platform, to provide capital and support to underserved small business owners in the 13 states LiftFund serves, including Texas. The investment from CNote, which commits up to three million dollars in funding, allows LiftFund to continue leveling the financial playing field in entrepreneurship by providing opportunity to those left out of financial mainstream, often women and minorities.

This partnership furthers both organizations' commitment to reducing the economic inequalities facing diverse small business owners like Sandy Cantu, owner of Storybooks School. Sandy started providing care and education from her home but when she was ready to move her business to a bigger facility to accommodate her growth, her bank couldn't help her. Like many entrepreneurs of color, Sandy was unable to meet current mainstream lending guidelines.

With support from LiftFund, and a couple of microloans, Sandy was able to grow her homebased business to a larger educational facility that now serves more than 100 kids and has created over 30 jobs in her community.

"Economic opportunities should never be determined by a zip code," said Janie Barrera, LiftFund President and CEO. "With CNote's support, LiftFund will expand small business lending to entrepreneurs, like Sandy, who need a hand up in growing their business. It's been studied, for every single dollar LiftFund provides a small business, there is a fourteen dollar net positive economic benefit at the local and state level. We are excited about this investment and the impact it will have in small businesses and their communities."

For more than 24 years, LiftFund has provided financial education and affordable capital to deserving and diverse small businesses like Sandy's. LiftFund's portfolio consists of 85% entrepreneurs of color, 40% women-owned businesses and 10% veterans. Since inception, LiftFund has injected over $280 million in small business capital to over 20,000.

"Loan after loan, LiftFund has shown a dedication to economic inclusion that deserves special recognition," said Yuliya Tarasava, CNote Co-Founder. "We at CNote are thrilled to support and deepen that commitment by offering a new innovative source of capital for them."

LiftFund's mission of strengthening the small business economy is aligned with CNote's commitment to boosting economic development in low-income communities. For every dollar loaned out by CNotes partners during the first half of 2018, fifty cents went directly to Low-and-Moderate Income (LMI) borrowers. At LiftFund, LMI borrowers constitute 66% of the organization's lending portfolio.
